BIOGRAPHICAL MEMOIRS OF FELLOWS OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY

The 1977 volume in this series is now available. As with previous volumes, it records the lives and achievements of Fellows and Foreign Members of the Royal Society whose deaths have recently occurred, related in the differing styles of the individual authors, usually close friends and colleagues.

Each memoir describes the subject’s contribution to science and, in addition, may also portray a more personal side, with glimpses of the humour, beliefs and wide-ranging interests which added to both character and achievement. To make the record as complete as possible, each memoir includes a portrait and a bibliography of the subject’s writings.

These volumes offer both knowledge and pleasure to all who are interested in human achievement and the sciences, and they provide an authoritative reference source for both scientific and general libraries. The contents of volume 23 are listed below.
